

While our in-facility programming will not be the same as it was pre-COVID, it does offer clients an opportunity to get out of the house and re-engage with familiar support staff and programming back in our Chrysalis facilities.

Clients can come to the Chrysalis facility in small numbers (5 to 6 clients and staff) and be scheduled into specific program areas to ensure social distancing requirements are met. For example, one client with one staff member will be in the art room and another client and staff member will be situated in the multipurpose room.

Prior to entry, everyone will be screened for symptoms and regular hand hygiene will be strictly adhered to. Transportation to and from the Chrysalis facility will still be up to the clients/families to arrange.

How did Chrysalis develop these in-facility services?

A number of elements and criteria are factored into every program and service developed and offered at Chrysalis. For example, some of the core criteria we use includes the alignment of learning opportunities with the Government of Alberta's Persons with Developmental Disabilities (PDD) funding program Quality of Life Framework, which is a way of measuring the degree to which a person enjoys the possibilities of their life.

Within the Quality of Life framework is an outcome Performance Management Framework (PMF) with four core pillars identified below and their respective domains which describe personal and environmental factors that influence quality of life.

|--------------------------------|---|
| Wellbeing | How to maximize personal wellbeing through physical, emotional & material wellbeing |
| Independence | How to provide supports to be as independent as possible through personal development and self-determination |
| Community Connectedness | How to engage with and be valued by community through human rights, social inclusion and interpersonal relations |
| Quality Services | How PDD-funded services meet the assessed needs and contribute to positive outcomes for each individual based on relevancy, effectiveness, efficiency and safety. |

What will this in-facility service cost?

There shouldn't be any additional costs for you related to in-facility services.

How Chrysalis programs and services are funded?

About 85% of our current funding for Chrysalis is from the Government of Alberta's Persons with Developmental Disabilities (PDD) funding program within the Community and Social Services Ministry. This funding is directed to helping adults with developmental disabilities to be a part of their communities and get services to live as independently as possible in their community.

- The PDD Program funds, monitors and evaluates the provision of services for individual Albertans with developmental disabilities. These services supplement the support of family, friends and community members, and assist clients to live as independently as they can in the community.
- Services are provided to support clients in their home, work and social environments based on the individual's assessed support needs.

Remaining funds come from Chrysalis' fund development activities like donations, fundraisers and grants, and from profits from our social enterprises - Chrysalis Woods and Plastics and chrysp.
